Going past the Plantation, Flatcatcher, tried to get on equal terms with the leader, who had no difficulty in maintaining his supremacy, going up the hill. On passing the rock he continued to increase his lead, while Flatcatcher, was beaten. The leader had just entered the straight when a dog got in front and was upset. Maclean cleverly kept An Ordinance to make further provision as his horse asfe, and Lightning, justified the confidence of the tipaters. With another small field, Mr Sassoon's pony was made a hot favourite; in fact, the race, bar accidents, was reckoned a dead certainty for Hero. Enthusiast and the favourite were both restive, and a false start was made before the trio were got off together. Hero led round the bend with the others close up. Enthusiast went up to Hero at the Rock and they kept together till they passed the stand, Reciprocation dropping far into the rear and looking hopelessly out of the running. Going up the hill for the second time Enthusiast fagged, and Reciprocation gradually shortened the distance between himself and the leaders. Fugitive was beaten going down the hill and while Bumptious drew up to the leader at the Village, Riatler came into the third place. About a furlong from the winning post a dog got on to the course and Thunderbolt shying got out of his stride. The dead heat was run off at the termination of the Welter Stakes. A good start was effected. Thunderbolt, in the inside, was at once set in it the first place, and led throughout. THE CHRONICLES OF

COLCHESTER. The following amusing skit in biblical language is given by 'Ezra the Younger in a Colchester paper, with reference to a recent financial crisis in that ancient

Now behold it came to pass that the peogrew and multiplied, and they prospered abundantly in every part of the city. Then built they unto themselves houses without the walls, for the city could not contain all them that would fain have sopurned therein.

For much merchandise was brought thither from alar, and many strangers trafficked in the market places. Yea, and artificers, a great host, encamped round about. The same wrought cunningly in brass and in iron and in wood and in leather. And the work of their hands sent the out unto the uttermost parts of the earth. The ships that went down to the deep were laden with the wares that the men o the city did fashion. The camel of the desert bare there to places afar off. So that much wealth was gathered up is the city. Silver and gold was there in abundance. Even sundry of them that toiled with their hands laid up riches for themselves, for it was in these days that the time drew nigh when the poor began to reap the reward of their labour. Now many of the citizens, and them that dwelt in the region round about, kept not their silver and their gold in their tents. lest the thief and the robber should break in unawares and despoil them.

But they entrusted their riches unto certain money changers of the city. The same dwelt in strong places, where thieves came not, and where nobe were able to break through and steal. And the money changers took in of the people's gold and silver in great abundance. and they hid it in their treasure houses. -Then went the citizens on their way re joicing, saying, Now shall our silver and our gold take not wings and fly away,

Howbeit the money-changers trafficked in the riches which the citizens had entrusted unto them, and they lent out of the money unto sundry merchantmen, that they might receive usury for the same. Nevertheless when any citizen had need of the gold and of the silver that he had carried unto one of the treasure houses of the city, he went thither and demanded the same, and the money changers gave it unto Now the treasure houses of the city were in number four, and they all stood in the chief highway, on the south side thereof. And all men had regard unto the money

The present publication, judging by the number now before us, is intended to occupy a position, as regards China and th neighbouring countries, some what simila to that which has been filled in India by the Calcutta Review. The great degree of at taction that has been bestowed of late years upon the investigation of Chinese literature, antiquities, and social developments, to say nothing of linguistic studies, has led to the accumulation of important stores of inform. ation, rendering some such channel of publicity as is now provided extremely desirable; and contributions of much interes fairly be looked or from the members of the foreign consular services, the Chinese Customs' corps, and the missionary body, among whom a high degree of Chinese scholarship is now assiduously cultivated and who are severally represented in the first number of the Review by papers highly creditable to their respective authors . Some translations from Chinese novels and plays are marked by both accuracy and freshness of style; and an account of the career of the Chinese post-statesman of the eleventh century, Su Tung-po, by Mr. E. C. Bowra, is not only historically valuable, but is also Hetinguished by its literary grace. Beside notices of new books relating to China and the East, which will be a useful feature of
